Democrats Spending No Money in Ninth Except for Legitimate Expenses.

Slemp Makes Statement Relative to Position Taken by Dixon.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Bristol, Va., October 29 .- Following the published statement of General R. A. Ayers, touching the contributions and expenditures of his campaign thus far, nobody will doubt that he is keeping his part of the agreement to spend no money to elect himself to Congress except what may be neces sary for the legitimate expenses of the campaign. The published statement indicates, however, that General Ayers has not sufficient funds to meet legitimate expenses as they should be met and for this reason the impression is gaining that more Democrats should make vocuntary contributions to his expense account. If he should spend from $1,000 to $1,500 for legitimate expenses, it would probably not be considered excessive.

Relative to the position taken by Chairman Dixon, of the Progressive party, concerning the race for Congress in the Ninth Virginia District, Representative Slemp said:

"I have just read what Mr. Dixon has had to say concerning his position with reference to candidates for Congress in the Ninth District. Mr. Dixon has been misled by Mr. Beveriey's statement in regard to this matter, which is clearly an effort to bolster up the Democratic cause.

"Every one realizes now that I will be elected by a good majority if Mr. Graham does not succeed in deceiving a number of Republican voters into voting for him, the effect of which would be to give one-haif of a vote to General Ayers.

There is a sickness among horses known as "Blue Monday." It comes always on a Monday. It is caused by horses overfeeding on Sunday and no work on that day. It is what might be termed "horse indigestion."

"Blue Monday" sickness usually manifests itself a short time after the horse is at work on Monday. Sometimes the horse is given a lay-off for the entire day; other times after an hour's delay he is on the way again.

But meantime deliveries are set back, promises are broken, customers become impatient and dissatisfied, and business is lost.

Messrs. John Wise and Son, up the street, are getting most of this lost business. They do not use horses in their delivery any longer. They use motor trucks.

Alco motor trucks are not affected by an idle and over-fed Sunday. They do not consume on that day. They are not susceptible to indigestion. They deliver the goods as well on Monday as on Saturday. They enable their owners to keep promises, to satisfy customers, to reach out and get new business.

A Memorable Performance.

Some years ago an all-star cast, comprising Stuart Robson, Henry E. Dixey, Walter Hale and a number of other well-known actors, gave a brilliant performance of "Oliver Goldsmith" at the Academy of Music: a few years later, Eleanor Robson, Mrs. Le years later,

Many of the scenes are transposed; the chronological order of the book is often altered, and the plot—the story of Oliver's parentage—is disclosed in the first few explanatory scenes. But the entity remains intact—the play is the "Oliver Twist" of Dickens, wonderfully well dramatized by Comyns Carr. All its hideousness, all its pathos, all its cruelty, have been retained.

all its pathos, all its cruelty, have been retained.

And all these elements are emphasized, intensified and given life by the people who depict them.

Wilton Lackaye, who succeeds Nat Goodwin as Fagin, endows the old master of thieves with a horrid vileness that lingers in the memory and before the eyes with a sickening sense of remembered repulsion. True to the book's description, he dresses the part with reddish, scanty hair and beard, and sneaks about, bent over in a greasy dressing gown, in a snake-like manner which, alone, is almost sufficient to create a feeling of nausea, Mr. Lackaye's make-up is, in itself, a veritable triumph in that art.

Edmund Breese, who follows Lyn Harding in the role of Bill Sikes, also makes up the part with consummate skill; he even goes to the length of padding his legs to the thickness mentioned in the story, while he wears a hat, instead of the cap assumed by Harding, following the book to that extent, though not to the length of adopting the color, brown, prescribed by the author. A trifle if you like, but Mr. Breese's performance is so perfect, so powerful, so appalling, in its loathsome brutality that the tride is mentioned as standing alone by way of fault in the midst of a wonderful characterization.

Constance Collier, of the original companies in London and New York, of fault in the midst of a wonderful characterization.

Constance Collier, of the original companies in London and New York, with a face of indescribable sorrow, almost like that of Lucifer in his fallen majesty—and her squared jaws diminish the incongruity of the faucted recemblance—makes of Nance a figure of hopeless, depairing tragedy that will not be forgotten tu many a year, while Marie Doro, also of the original New York company, looking like the Eaglet, the joung Napoleon, breathed life and pathos and boyish tragedy into the role of Oliver until many gazed at her slender figure through dimmed eyes.

And, in spite of the many, characterization.

Illamed membrane of the nose and throat it surely destroys the pernicious catarrha germs and ends all catarrhal misery.

And, is spite of the many changes of setting, the number of the scenes, and the difficult arrangement of some of them, the waits were so short, the scenery was handled so quickly, that the whole performance lasted only a few minutes longer than three hours the whole performance lasted only a few minutes longer than three hours.

A "crowded paper" prevents the optimized of columns in praise of this whole production, and there is spaceonly to urge all adults to see one of the two performances to-day, but not to take their children.
